Bez to stage a week-long bed-in protest against fracking

Bez to stage a week-long bed-in protest against fracking. Former Happy Mondays dancer Bez and his girlfriend Firouzeh Razavi will stage a week-long 'bed-in' to protest against fracking.

They are planning to emulate John Lennon and Yoko Ono's famous bed-in, but at the Montcalm Hotel at The Brewery in London.

In a press release, he said: "Where John Lennon and Yoko Ono holed up for a week in the Presidential Suite at the Hilton Hotel Amsterdam in Manhattan for their 'Bed-in for Peace' on March 25, 1969, Firouzeh and I are compelled to do our 'Bed-in Against Fracking' which has been thrust upon us all undemocratically."

He continues: "No one in Britain wants fracking. But the government is, against the will of the people, trying to force it upon us all. And we're not having it."

The couple will be joined in bed by a variety of guests, either in person or via social media and Skype, and a roundup will be streamed on YouTube each night.

Bez, real name Mark Berry, recently launched an MP election campaign in Salford.

His Reality Party had their name deregistered by the Electoral Commission and he failed to register a new one before the deadline.

The bed-in will begin on Monday, February 9.
